

INTERVIEW: 80-YEAR-OLD TOM WHEATCROFT IS THE OWNER OF THE WORLD'S LARGEST

WORK OF A

COLLECTOR: Tom Wheatcroft has 135 racing cars

A careers teacher once told me if you could turn your hobby into your job, you were one of the luckiest people alive.

Going one stage further than that, 80-year-old Tom Wheatcroft, owner of the world's largest collection of Formula One racing cars, has made his hobby his life. He's a lucky man and he knows it.

Strangely enough, the Donington Grand Prix Collection – row upon row of pristine, lovingly-maintained racing machines and historical Formula One memorabilia – is probably one of the motor racing world's best-kept secrets, but quite unintentionally.

The former builder explains: "It's the biggest collection in the world, with 135 cars. When we started it was on the television, but the number of people who say they don't know it's here is unbelievable."

"I don't know what we have to do to spread the word."

Housed in 36,000 square feet of halls and corridors at Donington Park Race Circuit – also owned by Tom – the collection's low profile a year before its 30th public anniversary defies belief.

Walking through each hall, the father-of-seven talks away, leaving no doubt that he could probably tell me a tale about every vehicle collected over 40 years.

He shows me one of his fondest projects – a total re-creation of a Bugatti Royale which took £1.6 million of investment and 10 years to build, with only copies of the original drawings to rely on and five remodelled ivory billiard balls serving as makeshift lever knobs.

Breaking off from yet another racing tale, Tom says: "I suppose I ought to have found a hobby that's a little less expensive."

"About five or six years ago, a London dealer offered me £160 million to buy the whole lot, but I couldn't sell them – they're part of me. I'm quite emotionally attached to some of the cars – I just can't help it."

A decade ago, another collector offered to buy the vehicle which started off the collection – a 1.5 litre Ferrari, which cost Tom just £1,000 in 1964.

The offer topped £1.7 million, but Tom could not entertain the thought of losing even one of his 'babies'.

The octogenarian is a man of many passions and also collects steam engines, tractors, windmills – even the odd speeding fine or two.

But nothing, it seems, will ever come close to his most enduring passion which enables him to count Formula One's finest – including the late, great Ayrton Senna – among his friends.

The entrance to the collection is graced by two life-sized statues of Senna and Juan Manuel Fangio – the Argentinian five-times world champion – who both died in 1994.

A hall within the collection is also dedicated to the memory of the pair, who Tom describes as 'the greatest'.

Tom's life-long love affair with Donington began at the age of 14 when he took an arduous bicycle ride from Wigston to go and watch motorcycle racing at the track in 1936. It all began with the motorcycles, but once Formula One started, it was just out of this world."

Tom was never to forget the motoring euphoria of his childhood and the experience of early Formula One.

He eventually bought the entire track and grounds from Major John Gillies Shields in 1970 - providing him with the perfect place to house his ever-burgeoning collection.

Having been used by the Ministry of Defence as the country's largest military vehicle depot during World War II, the track and grounds had fallen into disrepair over the years.

Tom remembers: "I remember I drove my wife down there to have a ride around the track and these two ladies were out walking a dog. They asked me what I was doing there and I joked that I had no right to be there at all unless, of course, I was going to buy it. That's when I had the idea.

"That was on the Sunday and by the Friday, it was mine."

GRAND PRIX

Six million pounds' worth of renovation, rerouting and modernisation later, the track hosted its first and only Grand Prix in 1993 - a memorable race which was voted by fans as the event of the season and in a more recent poll race of the century.

It's an achievement Tom would dearly love to repeat on a regular basis, but he says planning restrictions may make that impossible, in spite of the £2.5 million he has already spent on appeals.

He said: "I feel quite frustrated by it, when they go on about noise issues and we're right next to the airport anyway."

But he's clearly not one to give up and adds that he's in the middle of negotiations for another major Formula One event in the future.

No matter what political obstacles may fall across his path, he remains a man with drive.
